52% of voters approve of Supreme Court performance

June 29, 2020: Fifty-two percent (52%) of voters nationwide approve of the way the Supreme Court is performing its role. A Ballotpedia survey found that 31% disapprove and 17% are not sure.[1]

The survey also found that a narrow plurality (30%) believe the court's ideological balance is about right. However, 28% believe it is too conservative and 19% believe it is too liberal.[1]

Sixty-two percent (62%) of Hispanic voters approve of the court's performance as do 53% of white voters. However, just 39% of Black voters share that assessment. Among Black voters, 44% disapprove.[1]

A plurality of Republicans believe the court is too liberal while a plurality of Democrats believe it is too conservative. Seven out of ten independent voters believe either that the balance is about right (30%) or are not sure (40%).[1]

Yesterday's Number of the Day showed that 47% of voters see Supreme Court nominations as a very important voting issue.

Each weekday, Scott Rasmussen's Number of the Day explores interesting and newsworthy topics at the intersection of culture, politics, and technology. Columns published on Ballotpedia reflect the views of the author. Scott Rasmussen's Number of the Day is published by Ballotpedia weekdays at 9:00 a.m. Eastern. Columns published on Ballotpedia reflect the views of the author.

Footnotes:

1. ScottRasmussen.com, "Supreme Court approval rating at 52%," June 26, 2020