

Report on the Signature of Robert Hunter Biden

For John Solomon

The request was to conduct an Analysis of Hunter Biden's signature as found on the Burnham Access Management Employment Agreement dated April 16, 2015.

Previously, in 2022, an analysis of Hunter Biden's signature had been conducted in regards to the receipt for his laptop, which had been left off at a computer repair shop in Delaware.

The conclusion from that analysis was that the signature on the receipt was, indeed, that of Hunter Biden. In addition, there were several other signatures located, also written by Biden, which were used for comparisons as known signatures.

Selecting from those samples, all of them bore similarity with the signature on the Burnham Access Management Employment Agreement. But there is one which is so close to the current questioned signature that it is all that is needed for today's conclusion. It is the signature Hunter Biden wrote on his Social Security card dated 9/20/12.

Even a novice at signature analysis could readily see that the lines, the style, and the design all match how Biden signs his name. The two were signed three years apart. Note the initial sweep of the top of the capital R, the crossing back across the vertical line, the tail of the R, sweeping up to begin the H, the capital B, written similar to the number "8," and the design of the final lower-case "d." There are no wavering or unsteady lines on the Burnham signature. It is unequivocal that the same hand wrote both of these Hunter Biden signatures.
